Imagine Global Revolution (poem)

Ron Sakolsky

Spring, 2012

What I love about
the occupy movement
is that it makes no demands.
Is
a space
in which possibility
expands.
An opening
for imaginations
to upset
the applecart
of acquiescent
relations.

Imagine clearing the slate opening the gate rejecting the horrors of industrial civ un-Occupying Turtle Island and starting to live.

Imagine not simply eliminating corporate greed, but creating a world

with no corporations

to heed, a planet with no

capitalist system

to feed.

Imagine not just

governmental reform,

but an end to government with freedom the norm.

Not a left-wing

Tea Party

of patriotic citizen

dissenters,

but the demise

of the nation state

and an end to renters.

Imagine not merely

Officer Eco-Friendly

on a bike,

but No Cops to dislike

no police (to) force,

none at all, as a matter of course.

Imagine occupying

all the institutions of the capitalist state without official permission from the keepers of the gate.

Occupying everything that you now hate, and transforming

the world

before it's too late.

Tear up the bloody Constitution. Kick anarchy and start rockin' global revolution!
