

Anarcho-pacifism

Harold Barclay

2009

Anarcho-pacifists hold that anarchism is a philosophy of non-violence, arguing that since anarchism opposes all domination, it cannot endorse the worst form of domination, which is violence upon another person. While pacifism remains a minority position among anarchists, anarcho-pacifists have considerably influenced other anarchists in their emphasis on non-violent civil disobedience as a means of protest.

Perhaps a majority of anarcho-pacifists are Christians, basing their belief on the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 5–7). The most famous was Leo Tolstoy, who, via his influence on Gandhi, is among the most influential of anarchists. The earliest Christian anarcho-pacifist was probably Adin Ballou (1803–90). Later Christian anarchists include Russian existentialist philosopher Nikolai Berdyaev (1874–1948) and French theologian Jacques Ellul (1911–94).

A few Christian sects might be placed in this category as well, although none would appreciate being called anarchist. The conservative Anabaptist sects such as the Old Order Amish and the Hutterites believe there are two kingdoms: that of the world, represented by the state and violence, with which no Christian may be associated, and the kingdom of God, represented by the church as a holy community living according to the New Testament. Accordingly, they have always resisted state interference in their lives. A group of Russian origin bearing some similarities to the Society of Friends (Quakers) is the Doukhobors, within which the Sons of Freedom subsect has, at least until recent times, been very militant in its opposition to state attempts to direct their lives. Catholic Worker is another Christian anarcho-pacifist organization.

Apart from religious anarcho-pacifists, there are also those who consider themselves secular, most of whom reject religion. Many base their pacifism and anarchism on the innateness of the principle of mutual aid. Gustav Landauer (1870–1919), Bart De Ligt (1883–1938), and Paul Goodman (1911–72) are examples of secular anarcho-pacifists.

REFERENCES AND SUGGESTED READINGS

- Berdyaev, N. (1938) Slavery and Freedom. London: Geoffrey Bles.
De Ligt, B. (1989) The Conquest of Violence: An Essay on War and Revolution. London: Pluto Press.
Ellul, J. (1991) Anarchy and Christianity. Grand Rapids, MI: W. B. Eerdmans.

- Goodman, P. (1946) Drawing the Line. New York: Random House.
- Hawthorne, H. B. (Ed.) (1955) The Doukhobors of British Columbia. Vancouver: University of British Columbia Press.
- Hostetler, J. A. (1963) Amish Society. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.
- Hostetler, J. A. (1974) Hutterite Society. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.
- Landauer, G. (1978) For Socialism. St. Louis: Telos Press.
- Miller, W. D. (1973) A Harsh and Dreadful Love. New York: Liveright.
- Tolstoy, L. (1967) On Civil Disobedience and Non-Violence. New York: Bergman.
- Woodcock, G. and Avakumovic, I. (1968) The Doukhobors. Toronto: Oxford University Press.

The Anarchist Library
Anti-Copyright

Harold Barclay
Anarcho-pacifism
2009

Retrieved on 22nd November 2021 from onlinelibrary.wiley.com
Published in The International Encyclopedia of Revolution and Protest.

theanarchistlibrary.org